"White Slave" Traffic Act

Difference of opinion has developed regarding the purpose of the law under which Diggins and Caminetti are being prosecuted. The presiding judge maintained that to transport a woman across the state border for immoral purposes is a violation of that law, whether commercialism is an incident of the transaction or not. This would seem a natural interpretation of the law and one that should prevail, but others hold that it is aimed only against immorality as a "business." The supreme court will, in all probability, be appealed to for a decision on that point.

The supreme court has already passed upon the constitutionality of the act, and in doing so it held that "commerce among states" consists of intercourse and traffic between their citizens, and includes the transportation of persons and property. There may be, therefore, a movement of persons as well of property; that is, a person may move or be moved in interstate commerce. And the act under consideration was drawn in view of that possibility. What the act condemns is transportation obtained or aided or transportation induced in interstate commerce for the immoral purposes mentioned. In the decision an analogy is drawn between the pure food and Mann act. It is pointed out that congress has the same power to prohibit the transportation of girls from one state to another, for immoral purposes, as it has to prohibit the physical movement across state lines of adulterated articles of food and thereby preventing traffic in them between states. Such expressions as "transportation in interstate commerce," and the reference to the pure food law would seem to indicate that the defense in the case of Diggins and Caminetti has at least a fighting chance, slim, though it may be, and should be.

Hon. James R. Mann, member of congress from Chicago and author of the act, in a letter to The Light, explains that it grew out of the necessity for additional legislation to "prevent traffic in alien women for purposes of prostitution." He was chairman of the house committee of interstate and foreign commerce when his attention was called to this subject. At his request a bill was drawn, but it dealt mainly with the importation of alien women. Mr. Mann felt convinced that the law should cover not only the importation of women from one state to another, for immoral purposes, and the Mann act came into existence to meet that evil. Mr. Mann also uses the expression "interstate commerce." He says the bill "was drawn with great care so as to cover if possible every phase which could arise and yet be carefully guarded as interstate commerce so that the provision would be constitutional."

If it should turn out that the act covers not only the awful "traffic" in women but also such cases as now are in the public eye in California, the author of it and those who co-operate with him may have built better than they knew. But even if a different interpretation should be given to it, any state in the republic, we should think, has full authority and power to punish an outrageous offense committed within its jurisdiction, even if the offenders come from another state. And they should not go free, even if they can afford to hire private cottages. For those who take away other men's wives, or daughters, are as much of a menace to society as the low creatures who actually make a living out of the wages of sin which women pour into their hands.

The Mexican Antichrist

Among the many rumors associated with the invasion of Mexico which a number of hotheads without interest are busy promoting are several ridiculous stories wherein the name of the Hearst family is freely used. To read these one would imagine Mrs. Phoebe Hearst and her son, the former owner of the various Examiners had nothing at stake in the United States and were devoid of all loyalty to their country. It has been alleged that the Hearst interests were the primary reason for the war with Spain over Cuba. Neither W. R. Hearst, nor his mother, nor any relative of his on the face of the earth had five cents worth of interest in Cuba or any one of the Spanish possessions. So far as his being personally interested, it did not make a particle of difference to him whether we fought Cuba or Spain, or whether Cuba sank into the sea. And there is just as much justification for the statements regarding his attitude toward Mexico. It is true that Mrs. Hearst owns one large and two small ranches in Mexico, but it is also untrue that if Mexico were to become a part of the United States, this property would increase in value twenty or ten times or two times. If the United States should take Mexico the last place anybody would want to buy property for the next twenty or thirty years would be Mexico.

It seems strange that anybody with an ounce of sense could imagine for a minute that a man who is an international character, who owns nine or ten newspapers and five or six magazines, who has all the money that any human being could want, who has devoted his life to public movements where the public interests and not private interests were concerned, who has fought the moneyed classes—of whom he might easily be used, in behalf of the whole people, that such a lack for any instant trust or credit to destroy the independence of a whole nation because his number happens to be a few cents in that country.

Thousands of men in this country who have an intelligent admiration for Mr. Hearst would throw him and his papers if they thought for a moment he were willing to bring about a war costing millions of dollars and thousands of lives, if he were willing to destroy a government and bring ten million people under a government they did not want just to increase the value of a few ranches of relatively small value. Some day the American people will understand Mr. Hearst, and when they do they will be mighty proud that he is an American.

Carson is bringing itself on the big police on Labor day. The pretense back in Nevada did not know what she could do when her citizens made up their minds to do it, and now that they have acquired confidence it would be well to try it again and not let Reno know it all her own way.

A traveling wild west show was put on the blink when it came within three hundred miles of Reno. Nobody wanted to see the stage article when the real thing in rodeo was on the bills for Labor day.

FIRST SHIPMENT GOLD BULLION OUT OF MINA

DAVENPORT OF DOUGLAS CAMP SHOWS RETURNS FROM MILL RUN.

Manager Gus Priess of the Davenport-Independent Mining company of Douglas camp, in Gold Range Mining district, seven miles west of Mina, brought last Saturday for shipment to the mint a small bar of the yellow metal, the output of a test run of ore. Mr. Priess says the property of the company is looking fine. A crosscut was run from the bottom of the shaft and a good body of ore was opened up on which they are now staking. The shaft has been sunk to a depth of 350 feet and pick up the ore bodies that were opened in the two tunnels driven above. From this crosscut where the ore was cut it will give a vertical depth of about seven hundred feet and supply good ore reserves.

As the Davenport-Independent Mining company has several hundred tons of a good grade of free milling ore on the dumps and in their ore bins, Manager Gus Priess has been negotiating with the Gold Range Mining, Milling and Leasing company, who recently installed a stamp mill for treatment of Davenport ores. To this end a test run of 25 tons was made on the Davenport ores and the bar of bullion from this run was shipped to the mint.

Mr. Priess informs us that not only was the mill test and savings on the plates satisfactory, but that the ore values were highly gratifying. It now looks as though the persistent and thorough development work carried on under the personal supervision of Manager Gus Priess was to result in placing Douglas back among the gold bullion producing camps of Nevada, for which he is deserving of much credit and praise.—Western Nevada Miner.

Backache pains often come from weak kidneys.

'Twould save much needless woe.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Many residents of this vicinity endorse them.

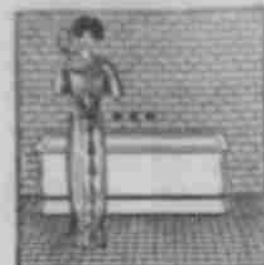

Mrs. T. H. Crane, 606 Alameda Ave., Reno, Nev., says: I had weak kidneys. There was lameness and a constant, dull pain across my back.

It interfered with my work. My kidneys acted irregularly. The joints of my fingers were sore and swollen.

Dark spots floated before my eyes. I had been reading statements given by other kidney sufferers who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, and I tried them. It wasn't long before the backache left me. The uric poison was removed from my system. I am only too pleased to tell about my experience.
